JEAN SCHOOL

Jean School International Course

Jean School International Course is an initiative by ROC van Amsterdam and House of Denim, in close collaboration with leading players in the denim & fashion industry.

The denim industry is booming, causing a growing global demand for jeans experts with a blue heart. To meet this demand, we have decided to start offering the Jean School International Course, in addition to the Dutch Jean School. Jean School International Course is a special one year study programme for international students with or without any prior industry-related experience.

The Jean School International Course is based in Amsterdam's unique Denim City, next to the Blue Lab clean laundry and denim archive. For more information on the location, visit: denimcity.org.

Blue course

The curriculum

The course will be 'coloured blue' and very practical. Participants will be trained to become professional Denim Developers: proficient in skills such as designing, cutting, stitching and washing jeans. These skills will be taught with an emphasis on craftsmanship and sustainability across all steps in the production process 'from crop to shop'.

The curriculum has been developed in close cooperation with HTNK Fashion recruitment & consultancy, global jeans brands and other industry experts. Big names in the denim industry support the initiative and actively participate in the program by providing guest lecturers and assignments. This ensures that students can stay abreast of all of the latest trends, developments and technologies. Students will also regularly visit denim companies. An ideal way to build up an impressive portfolio!

Students from non-EU countries enrolled in a 'MBO- VET' (Vocational Education and Training) study programme in Holland are eligible to apply for a visa for a maximum of 12 months.

In one-year you will become a Denim Developer.

The training program is very condensed. Students will be working 5 day's a week, 8 hours a day.

The program contains:

- Design, 8 hours a week
